2008 a historic and prophetic year

I remember in 2003 when the U.S. was preparing to launch war in Iraq, for some reason I always felt uncomfortable and bothered whenever I was hearing the plan for invading Iraq. I was hearing much oppositions from different voices in the media; some of those oppositions were the most ungodly group one can imagine who saw the immorality of the war. Nevertheless, it seemed like this thing was well planned no matter what sense any one wanted to make of it.

The hardest part of the preparation and media frenzy about the war was not the secular world but some Christian's unconditional support for the war. I have heard in one of the news commentary that a certain Christian base was the staunchest supporter of republican president to go to war. My question was what happened to: blessed are peace makers for they shall be called sons of God, the preaching of the gospel to the whole world as a witness. I believed many Muslims hate Christianity today even more because of that unjust war. They understand the republican party as the party of Christianity, and hardliner, therefore any action they undertake reflect on Christianity in America. The intention is well, to support a party with some moral value, but the danger remain, religious people can always be used by politicians.

In 2008 the people of America rejected the stigma that was placed on them, I do not believe this could have been done without the help of God. America has voted for president a non supporter of the Iraq war who happens to be a black man. It is estimated form 300, 000 to 1, 200 000 Iraqis lost their lives in the war. Something most people ignored about Iraq, The ancient Assyria, Capitol Nineveh, is in Iraq. The book of kings told us that the ancient lost tribes of Israel were taken captive and sent into Assyria. Now notice Isaiah eleven (11) said the Lord would extend His hand for a second time in Assyria, Egypt to gather again the children of Jacob, this expression means they are still there because they have not yet been gathered the first time. The gathering of the second time means God gather them the first time, they return to Israel and when Jacob trouble come they fled back to the countries they had been living for ages, in that case it is Iraq.
